W. B. RHOADES

Another of our most prominent and best-loved citizens has passed on to the unknown. I say citizen, for though poor Dusty found it necessary to leave this city many years ago, his heart and his devotion to the most intimate friends of his life always remained here, as is evidenced by the fact that his remains now rest in our beautiful cemetery.

"Dusty" was the appelation by which he was known to his friends here and seldom called by any other name. Though he had won honors and was entitled to the dignified title of "Judge," he preferred to be called just "Dusty." An affable and fun-liking individual, always happy and considerate, no better fellow, no more likeable one ever lived in this or any other town. To know him was to admire and like him. A born gentlemen, he consistently acted the part, and if he had any faults, they were simply human faults.

Poor "Dusty" was every inch a real man, and a man of integrity and honor. His sunny smile will be greatly missed around here. No better fellow ever lived than he. I can think of no greater tribute than just that for him.

W. C. WHIPPS.
