Obituary

Born at Osage, Iowa, December 9, 1866. Caroline Elizabeth Griswold's father was Asaph S. Griswold, and mother was Sarah Lorena Griswold.

Moved as a young girl to Dell Rapids, South Dakota, where she was married August 18, 1885 to Robert Wilmot Ervin. To them were born three children, Desmona E. Williamson, now in Washington, D. C.; Wilmot Bruce Ervin, Hollywood, California, and Ruth E. Cowan, of Whitefish, Montana.

There was a heritage of stamina and courage from New England ancestry entirely. All were first settlers in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, and New York. Her own parents were among the earliest settlers in Iowa and later in the Dakota territory when she was a young girl. Here, in Minnehaha county, South Dakota, she was employed as a typesetter, in her brother's printing office, before her marriage.

After marriage she lived in Pipestone, Minnesota, for a number of years, where her three children were born. She left Pipestone in January, 1909 to accept a position in the Government Indian Service, locating at the Fort Belknap agency near Harlem, Montana, where she remained for several years and definitely decided to stay in the West.

Later she was associated with the Harlem News, at Harlem, Montana, and it was while she was living here that she was married to Charles C. Baldwin, on May 17, 1913, and continued to live at Harlem until early in 1920, when the Baldwins came to Whitefish and built their home at 1026 Second street in which they have lived since then. Mrs. Baldwin was a charter member of Montana No. 78 O. E. S., at Harlem and was Past Worthy Matron of the Chapter and a member of Vista Chapter No. 44 O. E. S., at the time of her death. She was also a member of Mountain View Rebekah Lodge No. 73 and was Past Noble Grand in her Rebekah lodge at Pipestone, Minnesota.

During the World war she was very active in Red Cross work, at Harlem and had an overseas service flag in her window. In both Harlem and Whitefish she was interested in various projects for her community and in club work, until her health prevented further participation.

For the last three years she had been a patient invalid and since August, 1933, had been at home. On Monday, August 20, a fourth paralytic stroke made the end inevitable, despite the amazing spirit of resistance that had endured so long and carried her through attack after attack.

Mrs. Baldwin is survived by her husband Charles C. Baldwin of Whitefish; her daughters, Desmona E. Williamson, Washington, D. C.; and Ruth E. Cowan, Whitefish; her son, Wilmot H. Ervin, Hollywood, California; her grandchildren, Margaret Ellen and Edward Williamson, Washington, D. C.; and Winfield S. Cowan, III, Whitefish. She also leaves two step-children, Mr. Baldwin's daughter, Grace D. Baldwin,
