

FUNERAL RITES HELD AT ST. IGNATIUS FOR DUNCAN MACDONALD

St. Ignatius, Mont., Oct. 18—(AP)—Funeral services were held here today for Duncan MacDonald, Montana's oldest native son.

MacDonald died Saturday at Thompson Falls. He had spent his entire lifetime, 88 years in western Montana.

He was born March 31, 1849, at Fort Conan, a Hudson Bay company trading post near the present town of Dixon, on the Flathead Indian reservation.

His father was Angus MacDonald, factor of the trading post and a native of north Scotland. His mother was a Nez Perce Indian woman. Angus MacDonald built Fort Conan two years prior to Duncan MacDonald's birth.

Fort Conan was the last trading post built by the English Hudson Bay company in what is now the United States. The company sold the trading post to the United States government and withdrew after the international boundary survey in 1874 showed the fort on American soil.

Duncan MacDonald was recognized as an authority on western Montana history and Indian tribal lore. He was a guide for the Northern Pacific railway engineering crews when the railroad was built through the northwest more than half a century ago.

MRS. EUGENE MCCARTHY

Funeral services for Mrs. Eugene McCarthy, resident of Flathead county for more than 40 years, were held from the Waggener & Campbell funeral home Saturday afternoon with the Rev. Walter H. Sandy officiating.

The chapel was filled to capacity by the many friends attending and there were many beautiful flowers banked high about the casket. During the services a quartette composed of Don Shepard, Henry Lokensgard, A. Dunsire and Dr. J. A. Lamb sang two hymns and Don Shepard sang a solo.

The death of Mrs. McCarthy came as a shock to the entire community when it was announced Wednesday morning that she had passed away early that day as the result of a paralytic stroke which she had suffered Saturday evening.

Less than two months ago Mrs. McCarthy's sturdy vitality had brought her safely through the crisis of a major operation and up to the time of her stroke her health had almost been completely restored. Prior to the stroke Mrs. McCarthy had been in characteristic good spirits, having received visitors during the evening and displaying a vigor which could not presage such a sudden collapse.

Mrs. McCarthy came to the Flathead in 1889 on the death of her first husband, Andrew LaLonde. She immediately took her place in the then pioneer community and built up a wide reputation for her service to others.

It was said of her that she was always in readiness to go to the aid of anyone in distress and her generous sympathy and expert care to the ailing often contributed a large measure to their recovery.

In 1918 during the influenza epidemic Mrs. McCarthy, with no thought of her own well-being, nursed victims of the dread disease for 18 days with out once removing her clothes for much needed rest. There are hundreds of such self-sacrificing incidents which could be recalled throughout her long career of service to others.

For 25 years Mrs. McCarthy conducted a maternity hospital at her home and it is estimated that there are upward of 500 young men and women in Flathead county who were cared for at birth by her.

Mrs. McCarthy was an active member of the Royal Neighbors and Lady Owl lodges and her charitable work in these organizations was wide spread.

The text of the sermon delivered at her funeral was, "We Are Strangers, Pilgrims, and Sojourners," a heart-felt tribute to those who travel along life's path unostentatiously but whose works of charity to mankind are manifold.

In 1906 she was married to Eugene McCarthy, one of the first to make the Flathead his home. From this union was born one son, Duncan, now living in Kalispell.

Besides her husband she is also survived by two daughters and another son, Mrs. Violet Gunderson of Kalispell, Mrs. Nelle Brieffett of Tacoma, and Andrew LaLonde of Seattle; and two step-daughters, Mrs. Katie Farrar of Warland and Mrs. Dave Markhan of Baltimore, Maryland.

Pall bearers were two members of the Elks lodge, J. E. Uehlinger and Mayor J. P. Bruckhauser; two members of the Odd Fellows, Thomas Perry and L. M. Penrod, and two from the Knights of Pythias lodge, H. H. Hanson and Eugene Foot; and W. J. Pierce.

Obituary

The final chapter was written in the story of the long life of another of Montana's pioneers, with the passing of J. A. Monk at his home, July 10.

Mr. Monk, a citizen of Whitefish, Montana since it was first laid out in a new clearing in the midst of dense forest, in the early nineteenth century, has been part and parcel of its civic history and connected with many of its community affairs up to the time of his death.

Mr. Monk was born on the bank of the Mohawk River, in Herkimer county, New York, March 24th 1858, in a closely knit Dutch community. He received in early life training from these capable people that laid the groundwork for a life of many and varied activities.

In the year 1868, Mr. Monk's family set out with a covered wagon bound for the new settlement of Sed City, Nebraska, later renamed Bennett. Here under the usual pioneer circumstances he grew to manhood, starting his own career at the age of 16 years as a farmer plowing with oxen and using other by-gone agricultural equipment of the day. At the age of 18 he was a cattle driver, driving several herds of the famed Texas long horns to market at Omaha. Later he served as a special messenger for a secret service agent of the government operating against road agents, taking an active part in the capture and elimination of the notorious Middleton gang.

In his early twenties he worked for several different mercantile establishments in and around Bennett, finally landed a position with a large firm of lumber dealers. He served as lumber yard agent for this firm for a number of years, traveling about Nebraska and the Dakotas, establishing lumber yards in newly opened communities. He also served for a year or so as Suttler's clerk at the Post Trading station at Fort Meade South Dakota, the headquarters of General Custer's cavalry.

On April 27, 1881 he was united in marriage to Miss Luella Belt, the daughter of a Methodist minister. Together they roamed over most of the Nebraska and Dakota territory. During this period he became interested in the story of the Flathead country and in the year 1891 came on alone by stage to the foot of Flathead lake and crossing on the old steamer "Tom Carter." He landed at Demersville and remained there until the town was moved to Kalispell, where he was employed as a contractor and carpenter. He worked on many of the early residences and buildings in and about Kalispell, including the Methodist church. Mrs. Monk and daughter Nellie followed soon and they started a new home on a claim on the Flathead river near Lasalle.

Mr. Monk entered the service of the lumber interests working for the Flathead and State Lumber companies for a number of years, residing from time to time in Columbia Falls and the various lumber camp locations. While living at Lasalle, the second daughter, Winnifred died and the Monks left for California. Mr. Monk remained for only a few months and returned to Flathead. Their only son, Jesse was born in California. Mrs. Monk and the children returned to Flathead in 1897, residing for a year or more in Columbia Falls.

In about the year 1900 Mr. Monk took a homestead on the shore of what is now known as Monk's bay, Whitefish lake. They settled down permanently in Whitefish in the year 1902 or 1903.

Mr. Monk was especially interested in the school affairs and water department of the city, serving many years on the school board and at various times on the city water commission. He and Mrs. Monk were charter members of the First Methodist church in Whitefish and Mr. Monk was the last living member. He was also a member of the Chamber of Commerce and was interested in all of its activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Monk celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in Whitefish in 1931. Mrs. Monk passed away in 1934 and the daughter, Mrs. J. T. Jackson, died suddenly in the spring of 1936. Under the strain of these two losses, Mr. Monk managed to bear with a Christian fortitude and courage, but it left him to finish the balance of his life alone. He remained in his own home and continued to keep busy at his carpenter shop up to within a few months of his death.

Of the three children born to Mr. and Mrs. Monk only one, their son, Jesse, is still living.

Mr. Monk is survived by four brothers and one sister in the middle west and the following grandchildren and great grandchildren: Winnifred, Patricia, Jeanie and John, children of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Monk of Anaconda; J. T. Jackson, husband of Nellie Monk and their two daughters, Mrs. Roy Premo of Klamath Falls, Oregon and Mrs. Kenneth Griffin of Butte, Montana and the great grandchildren, Tommy Premo, Jack, Kenneth and Eileen Griffin.
