Tribute

(Contributed)

He was genial companion, a true friend and a devoted, loving husband and father. His life was so marked by righteousness, manliness and gentleness that he was a living example of this verse:

"To live as gently as I can,
To be, no matter where, a man.
To take whatcomes of good or ill
And cling to faith and honor still."

He brought nothing into the world. He took nothing out. But if friendly service to fellowmen can be measured—and doubt not that the Almighty measures it—he gave much to the world.

"What we have done for ourselves alone dies with us; What we have done for others and the world remains and is immortal."
