Seven Killed In Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — A grenade exploded in a downtown movie house this afternoon in Phnom Penh, and police said seven persons were killed and 25 others were injured.

The police said the grenade was planted in the center of the theater while the movie was going on.

Hundreds of frightened persons poured out of the theater as police and security agents pulled the dead and wounded from the building and took them to the hospital.

Drug Defendants Given Sentences

Sentences were imposed Monday in the 11th District Court on three persons involved in drug cases.

Judge Robert C. Sykes deferred sentencing of Steve Fedenberg, 19, Kalispell, who had pleaded guilty to a felony count of criminal sale of dangerous drugs. Specific terms of probation were ordered.

Judge Robert S. Keller

deferred imposition of sentence for one year in the case of Michael Knudler, 22, of Columbia Falls, and David L. Honey, 22, of Kalispell. Both had pleaded guilty on a misdemeanor charge of possession of dangerous drugs. Both are to serve 10 days in the county jail. All three defendants will be under the supervision of the district parole officer.

Water Workshop Today At Polson

POLSON — Second in a series of four water workshops on the Flathead River basin is scheduled for this evening at the Cherry Valley School in Polson. The session will move to Kalispell at Flathead High School Wednesday and Whitefish High School Thursday. All sessions begin at 7:30 p.m.

Flathead Valley residents are invited to offer their proposals on beneficial uses of waters of the river for inclusion in a proposed state water plan being developed in Montana. Staffing the sessions are Nancy Lefler, who spent the summer in the valley developing plans and proposals, and Jack Acood and David Hicks from the State Department of Natural Resources and Conservation.

Horsemen To Meet At Vets Home

COLUMBIA FALLS — Why horses belong in the wilderness is the topic for a presentation by R. W. "Bob" Miller, associate professor of range and animal science department at Montana State University, at Wednesday night's meeting of Back Country Horsemen. This fourth in the series of wilderness management presentations will be at Montana Veterans Home in Columbia Falls. The public is invited.

Also on the agenda will be the selection of a nominating committee.

Refuse Board To Pick Manager

The Flathead County Refuse Disposal District board of directors will meet tonight at 7:30 in the district office to select a new district manager.

The directors will choose from seven applicants screened from the original 39 aspirants to the position vacated in early September by Harold Gringer who resigned to take a position in California.

Gringer earned slightly more than $1,000 a month in the position.

The seven applicants were interviewed by the board at its regular meeting last Tuesday, but final decision was deferred until answers were received to letters checking references cited by the seven.

The meeting will be closed to the public under a provision in the Montana Open Meeting Act which allows public boards to meet in closed session to discuss personnel matters.

Energy-Ecology Conflict

of the four-hour meeting, 17 persons spoke — eight in favor of the program, three expressing no clear support or opposition at the present time and six opposed or raising questions.

Chief among the program's proponents were Kent Newman of the Anaconda Aluminum Co.; George Wolsiad of the Aluminum Workers Trades Council; R. J. Marantette, Columbia Falls Chamber of Commerce; Vaughn Lowell, president of the Columbia Falls Aluminum Workers International local; McLaughlin, and Joe DeLong, chairman, Flathead County Board of Commissioners.

Opponents included Bill Dickinson, Flathead chapter, Trout Unlimited; Bob Muth, Flathead chapter, Montana Wilderness Association; Ben Cohen, Whitefish, representing himself and children; John C. Cochrane, Big Arm, the Flathead Lakers, and Les Espeland, Flathead County sanitation.

"We feel it is imperative," DeLong said, "cloud seeding be conducted in Flathead County to increase the snowfall in the South Fork of the Flathead River drainage."

"The electrical power shortage in the Northwest," he said, "has caused a marked reduction in industry and more especially in the refining of aluminum at the Anaconda plant at Columbia Falls."

DeLong said the commissioners believe the benefits from the program "far outweigh any damage (to wildlife) that may occur."

In its section on unavoidable adverse environmental impacts, the statement lists "a slight increase in winter stress on big game, small mammals, birds, vegetation and invertebrates; loss of some winter range for big game herbivores; possible increases in siltation, thermal variations, and streamflow changes from additional runoff."

The statement said these impacts "would be transitory and minor."

Cochrane said he believes the BPA has "oversold" its power generating capacity and questioned the "minor and transitory effect" on big game winter range.

"It takes years and years for browse (vegetation eaten by big game animals) to restore itself, and sometimes it never does come back," he said.

The South Fork elk herd, he said, has the lowest calf rate of any herd in Montana, and the BPA offers no assurance the herd would not be reduced further.

Ed Corpe, supervisor of the Flathead National Forest, said the chief of the Forest Service will submit written comments on the proposal later.

Determining whether impacts on wildlife and the Job Marshall Wilderness Area are "transitory and minor," is a critical responsibility, Corpe said, and the statement brings up other important resource considerations in which many questions "are left unanswered."

Harold Passmore, a Kalispell farmer, voiced support for the proposal saying, "We are now in a critical period, and the general run lately has been the lack with people and everything for the deer and elk."

Pointing out he has seen large numbers of deer on his land, Passmore said, "Deer can make rapid increases, and they don't need 978,000 acres."

Espeland criticized the statement, saying the BPA is trying to alter something without "knowing anything about it."

Saying silver iodide crystals held in snow are likely to enter the water course, Espeland said the BPA "has not demonstrated anywhere that this will help water quality at all."

Cohen said an environmental impact statement on the program prepared by the Montana Department of Natural Resources and Conservation indicates Montana exports 80 times more power than it imports and that the program would produce only enough extra power to "run the Anaconda plant going for 30 additional hours at capacity."

Wolsiad, Newman, Marantette and Lowell all noted current power cutbacks have resulted in the layoff of 114 men from the Anaconda plant and said they believe the economic benefits to be derived from the program far outweigh any damage to wildlife and fish.

Saying the trades council always has stood "four-square in support of preserving the environment, the stress on wildlife from the proposal "in no way compares with the downright hardship on those men not working."

J. R. Erickson of Evergreen questioned the wording in the statement in its discussions of possible adverse impacts.
