Organist was Beth Kober and she accompanied solist Richard Darling, who sang "Somebody Bigger Than You and I", and "How Great Thou Art." Flutists Laurie Weeden, Ann Curtis and Sandi Evans also played a selection.

Memorials which were composed by the daughter of the deceased, Cherolette Warren, were distributed to those attending, and included poetry selections and the following tribute to her father:

"Coming away from a visit to his house three things spoke to me especially of Stan:

the carefully pressed wildflowers hidden in a book, the freezer full of fresh carrots and strawberries from his garden, the bright yellow kite blazing over his doorway.

Mind you, there was dust and confusion too, but they were unimportant.

"I would like to remember him working in his garden, marveling over the first green tip of an onion, the sweetness of a carrot. He loved the earth and all its bounties and shared that with us.

"I would like to remember him gathering the wild flowers of spring, trying to catch their beauty, the freshness of youth, the essence of dreams. He shared those with us too.

"And finally, I would remember him soaring into the sky, his spirit tugging free of its earthly ties, to celebrate the beauty and mystery of life, handing it on to his friends and their friends after them, brightening each other's lives like the kite over the doorway."

Mr. Gould is survived by his daughter, Cherolette (Mrs. George) Warren of Sequim, Wash., a son, William, Eureka, brother, Lindsay Gould of Friday Harbor, Wash., and five grandchildren.
