Franklin Ottomer Faust, 84

The Old Mountain Man of Essex crossed the Great Divide on Sept. 11, 1997, at North Valley Hospital in Whitefish.

He was born Franklin Ottomer Faust in Melina, Penn., on Nov. 16, 1912, to Harvey and Ida Faust.

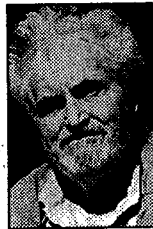

"Ol Griz," as he later came to be known, left home in 1931 and spent 13 years working and traveling by boxcar and thumbed across the United States and throughout the West. He often said he graduated from "The School of Hard Knocks" with a degree of "Dingbat" in Hobology.

In 1942, he enlisted in the Army. He was attached to the Airwing at Llad Field in Fairbanks, Alaska, until 1945.

He met and married Louise Hunter Richardson at war's end in Detroit, Mich. They moved their family to Cut Bank, where he worked as city waterman. He was also employed on construction projects on the Richardson and Alcan highways in Alaska.

From 1953 to 1972, he helped keep the Great Northern and Burlington Northern railroads in place and free of snow at Essex. After retirement, he continued to live in Essex, where he was very content and happy. He remarried in 1972 to Janice Renkin.

He dearly loved the mountains, streams and lakes in the Essex area. He camped, tramped, hunted and fished throughout the area when not working. His was a life as close to the true mountain man as this century has ever seen. His generosity, woods skill, endurance and strength became something of a local legend. Although hindered by two artificial hips and stiff knees, he continued to be a fixture on trails and in the remote backcountry until he was at least 80.

He had two special loves in his life; his six children and Marion Lake, where he often took them. His old campsites, where any passerby was welcome to coffee or tea and a story, will be sadder places for his passing, and the campfire ashes cold.

Old Griz spent his last two years at the Columbia Falls Veteran's Home and at age 85 went to see "The Man Upstairs" and his friends, family and two special "girls" who preceded him.

He is survived by his wife, Janice, in Sequim, Wash., and his six children, Leota Stewart, of Butte, Daniel Richardson, of Olney, Phillip Richardson, of Olney, Charles Faust, of Portland, John (Bill) Faust, of Essex, and Janet Bargmann, of Butte and many grandchildren and great grandchildren.
